Dedication

The Papa Tell Me a Book series is obviously fiction but with a lot of true life experiences. This writing adventure started by suddenly having to make up stories while putting a grandchild down for a nap ... and the sudden stress of creating that story while not disappointing a three year old that is looking deep into your eyes expecting a masterpiece.

There is such beauty in a child's mind. Untarnished. Unblemished. As a grandparent, I have a ringside seat to watch a little one's mind develop ... without the anguish and stress of being the actual parent. The way a little one puts words and facts together ... only using the knowledge they have accumulated up to that point ... never fails to amaze. If you think about it, that's their truth. They do not know any better. But wouldn't that be a great place to be? Having a mind without all the clutter and horror ... just the simplicity of life as a child.

I hope you enjoy Volume 2 of the Papa Tell Me a Book series ...
Blanket.

“OK, buddy. Grab a couple of books and hop into bed. It’s time for your rest.” David’s grandpa leads him by the hand into his daddy’s old room. David jumps into bed.

About the author

Ron Kinscherf quit a 30-year career as an Information Technology (IT) Consultant in April of 2021 with no plans for employment. During a Sunday family dinner, a discussion took place discussing potential jobs. His daughter-in-law suggested writing children's books as he would make up stories for bedtimes.

Kinscherf did not take the suggestion seriously and continued to interview for 'normal' positions in the IT World. One Sunday while barbecuing, Kinscherf watched as his grandson smashed anthills on the back patio. He wondered, "How do the ants feel about that?". With that thought a business was born.

Kinscherf, 60, has a Bachelor of Arts in Radio/TV from Quincy University (Quincy Il.) and worked in talk radio for five years. He did play-by-play for 25 years and is in the Illinois Basketball Coaches Hall of Fame for Media.

He is married with two children and five grandchildren. Kinscherf resides in Quincy, Illinois.
